The purpose of life is not to be happy. It is to be useful, to be honorable, to be compassionate, to have it make some difference that you have lived and lived well. To leave the world a bit better, whether by a healthy child, a garden patch, or a redeemed social condition; to know even one life has breathed easier because you have lived. This is to have succeeded.

Ralph Waldo Emerson

"United be our purpose, harmonious our hearts, and unified our minds—just as the universe exists in perfect togetherness."

Jai Shree Krushna,

At Muni Seva Ashram, this ancient wisdom from the Rigveda beautifully reflects the essence of our mission. As human beings, we are inherently social, thriving through collaboration, shared purpose, and mutual care. It is in unity that we find the strength to transform challenges into opportunities and dreams into reality.

Each day at the Ashram, we witness the profound impact of collective action. Whether it is through compassionate healthcare, quality education, or sustainable practices, our shared commitment drives meaningful change. A small group of individuals, fueled by compassion and dedicated to public welfare, can indeed create ripples that touch countless lives and uplift entire communities.

Unity lies at the very foundation of a vibrant and resilient society. It is the force that empowers the weak, strengthens the powerless, and builds bridges of hope. In a world grappling with challenges, this collective strength—rooted in service and solidarity—becomes our most powerful asset.

As we look to the future, let us draw inspiration from the timeless adage: "In Kaliyuga, unity is strength" (सङ्घे शक्ति कलौयुगे).

With harmonious hearts and a unified vision, we can co-create a world that is not only peaceful and inclusive but also deeply sustainable for generations to come.

With Heartfelt Gratitude for 2024

& Boundless Hope for 2025,

What is True Service?

Service is not just about helping others—it is about selflessly working for their well-being, finding joy in their happiness, and offering help with a pure heart. It is the act of giving without expectation, embracing the ideals of love, humility, and devotion.

The sacred grounds of Muni Seva Ashram have been lit by countless selfless souls. Among them is Manchhaba, whose life is a testament to how service, rooted in love and compassion, can transform not only the giver but the entire community.

Manchhaba came to the Ashram seeking refuge from the pain of an abusive marriage and broken home. What began as a quest for safety became a lifelong commitment to service. Welcomed with open arms by Pujya Ben, the Ashram became her home, and its mission, her own. She started by helping with chores, but as the Ashram grew, she took on the role of protector and caregiver to the children, without hesitation, without being asked.

Her life was never about comfort. She worked tirelessly, whether tending to the fields, selling vegetables at the gate, or ensuring the children had what they needed. At night, she slept in the corridors, always near the children she loved. To them, she wasn't just a caretaker—she was their mother, their protector, their embodiment of love.

Her unwavering dedication never faltered. Despite age and hardship, Manchhaba's spirit remained strong. To her, service was not a burden—it was a joy. Every task was an opportunity to give back to the community that had embraced her.

The children she cared for never felt the absence of a mother, for in her, they found love, protection, and warmth. Manchhaba's presence was a shield of safety, her love flowing freely through the Ashram.

Her simple, humble life is a shining example of what it means to serve with a pure heart. Manchhaba embodied true service—selflessness, kindness, and compassion. Her legacy lives on in the hearts of all those she touched.

We bow to her with deep respect and gratitude. Her unwavering dedication continues to inspire us all.

In 2009, Reshma, from Palanpur, joined the GNM nursing program at the Ashram's Nursing Institute in Goraj. She described her time there as life-changing: “It wasn't just admission; I found a family. The serene campus, nurturing energy, and education untouched by commercialization were priceless. Beyond academics, the Ashram offered activities that enriched our values, skills, and creativity. Living in a well-facilitated hostel and enjoying organic, wholesome meals felt like a sanctuary. Those six years were paradise. Despite being the only Muslim student in my batch, I never faced any bias. Everything I am today—my career, respect, and family life—is a gift from the Ashram. But the greatest treasure I found here is my 'Pappa.'”

With heartfelt gratitude, Reshma recalled countless memories of “Pappa”—Dr. Vikram Patel. From encouraging them to eat karela (bitter gourd) to organizing picnics and scolding them for loud music, he embodied a loving yet disciplined father figure. She laughed while reminiscing about how he would tip water over their heads during night shifts if they nodded off, likening him to Aamir Khan's “Bapu sehat ke liye tu toh haanikarak hai” from the movie Dangal.

Today, Reshma is the Head Nurse of the Infection Control Department at Ahmedabad's Jivraj Mehta Hospital, where her dedication is widely recognized. Even at the hospital, everyone fondly knows Dr. Patel as “Reshma's Papa.”

Though her marriage has taken her away from the Ashram, Reshma's bond with it remains unbroken. With a playful smile, she told Dr. Patel, “If only the Ashram arranged jobs for sons-in-law, no daughter would ever leave!”

As we bid farewell, Dr. Patel's glistening eyes reflected the quiet pride of a father who had nurtured not just a career but a life of fulfilment. Witnessing such a bond was a privilege—a poignant reminder of how love and support can transform lives.

Pulse of the Ashram

Muni Seva Ashram pays tribute to brave soldiers on Armed Forces Flag Day. We contributed to the AFFD fund, supporting the welfare of soldiers and their families. New Year - New Segment

As we step into 2025 with renewed hope and energy, we are thrilled to introduce a heartfelt addition to अनुसंधान—our new segment, “Invited Thoughts.”

This special corner is dedicated to featuring the voices of our esteemed guest writers, who bring unique perspectives and valuable insights on topics that matter. Through their words, we aim to inspire, inform, and enrich our readers in meaningful ways.

For our very first feature, we are honoured to have Mr. Niek Slooter, a passionate advocate for Waldorf education philosophy. Mr. Slooter has been instrumental in guiding its integration at our EMRS, Maganpura Campus, and Nursing Institute. His dedication and expertise continue to leave a lasting impact.

Here is what he has to share with all of us:

Waldorf education at E.M.R.S.

Jai Shri Krishna,

I am Niek A.H. Slooter, MSc. MEd. from the Netherlands and on the beautiful Muni Seva Ashram for the third time. Every visit feels like a gift and I absolutely enjoy the place, the people and facilities. I stay at Govardhan and am very happy with the good facilities, very tasty and healthy food, the friendly people and good management! Everyone who is involved with the Muni Seva Ashram can be very proud of what has been achieved so far and the current developments.

One of main reasons why I am here is to inspire and support the fantastic teachers from E.M.R.S. and recently I started this also at the Nursing College. Thanks to the very hard working and open-minded principals, this is made possible. During my visits I have been observing many lessons from many teachers to see how they were teaching and by asking many questions got more insight in the current methods, pedagogy and didactics. From there I started sharing and demonstrating didactical methods & pedagogical approaches based on Waldorf education.

Waldorf education is developed on the ideas and teachings of Rudolf Steiner, an Austrian educator and philosopher who opened his first school in Stuttgart, Germany, in 1919. Waldorf education does not promote any particular worldview or religious beliefs although it does actively acknowledge a spiritual dimension to human beings and nature and cultivates this in its practice, without directly mentioning this to the students.

Central to Steiner's philosophy is the belief that three developmental stages—early childhood, middle childhood and adolescence—are crucial to optimal learning. Each year and stage in child development comes with specific characteristics and needs so the curriculum and approach from the teacher is adjusted to these specific stages and year characteristics. Steiner's schools focus on “whole child” development, rather than the narrow academic focus many schools seem to have. A developmentally appropriate, experiential, and in higher graders more academically approach integrates science, languages, social sciences, history and arts in all disciplines and years.

Waldorf education also means that all the teaching is so organized that the maximum amount of learning experiences and content can be brought to the students in the minimum amount of time using the simplest possible means.

Teachers avoid to share their experiences in materialistic terms only but try to create real relationships and connections that can be directly perceived by the students in their daily life. Teaching is done in a rhythmic way during every lesson and thinking, feeling and willing are essential in each lesson. The lessons are very hands on and questions based. The students do experiments, the teacher asks a lot of questions and the students together form the possible answers and come to a conclusion together.

Just as we provide children with clothing with enough room for their body to move and grow freely, as teachers we respond to their inner needs by giving them age-appropriate content and material, not just for their present stage but broad enough for further expansion. They should be given time and freedom to grow and truly understand the concepts & contexts we share with them. Waldorf education creates a deeply meaningful learning process upon which experience, not just acquisition, underscores knowledge, thereby encouraging students to be active thinkers.

At E.M.R.S. many Waldorf principles are already applied like lots of groupwork, experience-based learning, a new time table with lessons from 70 minutes in the morning and minimum 50 minutes in other lessons and many teachers have much more time for individual students. The coming months, together with other Waldorf colleagues, we will support and inspire the teachers from E.M.R.S. and the Nursing college even more and if possible, also other schools that are connected to the Muni Seva Ashram.

Thank you all and if you have any questions, feel free to email me bennieks@gmail.com

Our 4th semester students of Muni Seva Ashram's nursing institute showcased a thought-provoking skit on "Management of Needle Stick Injury and Blood Spillage"

In June 2024, our Green Campus welcomed Sunita Vasava, and it didn't take long for her to become a beloved teacher at Vivekanand U. B. Shala, Vankuva. Her journey is a beautiful circle of giving back to the very place that once shaped her life.

Sunita completed her higher secondary education at the same Vivekanand U. B. Shala, where her roots of discipline, leadership, and service were nurtured. She went on to earn her master's degree in rural studies from Gramseva Mahavidyalaya under Gujarat University and also pursued a bachelor's in education. But it was her time at Vivekanand school, especially as a “Kotharmantri” during her 9th to 12th grades, that planted the seeds of her confidence and zero-wastage values.

She recalls those formative years fondly—learning to care for her surroundings and embracing responsibility with a quiet dignity. Deeply inspired by her teachers, she imbibed “Gandhi Vichar” into her life and continues to live by it. Today, she doesn't hesitate to roll up her sleeves and clean the campus, setting a profound example for her students. Her respect for resources is evident in the way she uses every piece of paper to its fullest, knowing it comes from a living tree.

Now, as a teacher of agriculture at her alma mater, Sunita is filled with gratitude for the school, the teachers, and the education that shaped her. Teaching at the very institution that instilled in her the values of hard work and humility feels like a divine blessing to her.

Sunita Vasava is not just a teacher; she is a beacon of inspiration, embodying the spirit of giving back with grace and gratitude. Her story reminds us of the enduring power of education to transform lives and communities.

From Classroom to Courtroom: The Journey of Kalpita Bhaliya

“Becoming a great school or a great teacher is no less than a Herculean task. It requires deep understanding, unwavering dedication, and boundless love. If every school and teacher gave as much to their students as mine did, society would have far less need for counsellors and laws.”

Kalpita Bhaliya, an alumna of Shri Vivekanand UUB School, managed by Muni Seva Ashram, is now a successful lawyer. Her journey to success is a testament to the nurturing environment of her school and the dedication of her teachers. The residential facilities of the school fostered a strong sense of community within her, helping her develop empathy, an understanding of others' problems, and the ability to appreciate different personalities and joys. These skills are at the core of her fulfilling work in the legal field today.

When asked about her school, her eyes light up, and she shares, “If God appeared before me today and asked me to wish for one thing, I'd ask to relive my school days.” She fondly remembers how her hard work and discipline in studies earned her a scholarship, making her further education smooth and accessible.

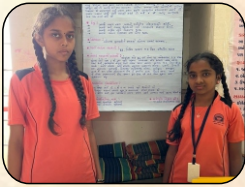

Kalpita's story is not just about her personal success—it is a reflection of the transformative power of quality education. It is a story of gratitude, growth, and the endless possibilities that emerge when students are given the right foundation to thrive.
